
The Sixth Holy Grail War

“Welcome to the Holy Grail Wars. You have been chosen as a Master, or summoned as a Servant. For the uninitiated, or those who find their mage’s education to be lacking, let me fill in the gaps. Pay attention. Some of this information may improve your chances of survival.”

– Chuch Arbiter

As implied by the name, this is the sixth contest for The Holy Grail. This isn’t The Holy Grail, nevertheless, the Church has presided over these trials for the last couple hundred years. The Holy Grail was created by the three first families, Eizenberg, Tohsaka and Matou, in a ritual so secret it is rumored that the details are lost even to these families.

The Holy Grail is an omnipotent wish granting object. Alas, only the one deemed worth by the Grail may make a wish on the Grail. Approximately every 60 years, The Holy Grail selects seven Masters, summons seven Servants, and appears in Fuyuki City, Japan. The winning pair (master and servant) will have the opportunity to have their wishes granted by The Holy Grail. Winning is determined by being the last pair left alive.

Seven masters are chosen for this contest. The first families are given priority you might say. There has not yet been a war where these three families did not all participate. The last few masters to round out the set are often from very young mage families (only a few generations), and are thus usually very weak. Each Master is granted three Command Seals. These denote your status as a Master. As long as you still have Command Seals, you retain your status as Master. Even if your servant is destroyed. It is technically possible for a non-mage to serve as Masters, but without the ability to perform magecraft, they cannot summon a servant.

Seven servants are summoned for this contest as well. Each master summons one servant. When the last servant is summoned, the contest is considered begun. The servants are all heroic spirits – identities from the past, present or future who have had, or will have, a major impact on human history. Servants answer the call of the grail because they have some unfulfilled wish from life that they wish fulfilled now thorough the only means available to them: The Holy Grail.

The grail itself will manifest in the physical world when the war nears its completion. There are four places in Fuyuki City where the grail can appear, due to the spiritual leylines: the Catholic church on the edge of town, the Tohsaka Estate, the New City Convention Center, and Ryuudou Temple.
